

THE DESCENDANTS OF JULIAN LAURE

The Pioneer Lord in North America

by
F. E. Lord of the Eighth Generation

Introduction

The name LORD is of French origin, and it is generally understood that the spelling was changed in Canada. An inquiry to the Public Archives in Ottawa regarding possible spellings of the name brought a reply as follows:

Among the Gaudet Papers, five spellings are found for the name LORD. They are: Laure, L'Or, Lore, Lor, and Lord--Research No. 29548.

It appears that Laure was the French spelling according to a source to be quoted later. The French laure means "crowned with laurels, a mark of honor, fame or distinction."

Perhaps the most complete history of the generations of Lords in Canada may be found in 300 Years of the Gervais-Roy Clan which was written by Brother Bernard Gervais, CSC, a cousin of Mrs. John Kremer, formerly of Monticello, Indiana. Mrs. Kremer gave a copy of this book to Dr. Maurice Lord who was her dentist.

Brother Bernard, a teaching fellow at Notre Dame University, supplied much of the information from Canadian sources which is summarized here. He had searched for information in the Gaudet Papers in the Public Archives, the Historical Division, Ottawa, Canada, and in the library of St. Joseph University, Memramcook, New Brunswick. In private correspondence he pointed out that:

... the name was originally Laure, not Lord; it was the fault of the English at the time of the expulsion of the Acadians that this change was made. It was Jacques (James) Laure who was exiled; the chances are that very few of the Acadians could read or write, and the British could think of no better spelling for the name than their English Lord, and so that is what is found on the records thereafter. Julien Laure dit Lamontagne was the original Lord of the line in America--which means that he had a surname, Lamontagne, which in English is translated The Mountain, dit meaning called.

NEW WORLD DESCENDANTS
A Summary of
The Lords in Canada and the United States

On the basis of information provided by Brother Bernard Gervais, C.S.C. in letters, and data from his history "300 Years of the Gervais-Roy Clan", as well as from other research, the first eight generations on the paternal side can be identified. Edward, of Fowler, became the sixth, his children (Clovis, Frank, etc.) the seventh, and his grandchildren (the oldest living generation today--1979) comprise the eighth. (You will note that these numbers refer to generations in North America, the oldest known ancestor being designated as No. 1.)

GENERATION 1 - Julien Lord, 1654-1724 (Anne C. Girouard)
Julien (Laure) was the original Lord to come to Acadia from France. The date was about 1670. Records of his family in France were lost in a church fire. Julien was buried in Port Royal. Jacques, second generation, was the second of Julien's nine children.

GENERATION 2 - Jacques Lord, 1678- (Marie Charlotte Bonnevie)
His second wife was Marie Charlotte Bonnevie. Honore, third generation, was perhaps the ninth child. (If these dates are correct, Jacques was sixty-four years old when Honore was born. Is there a possibility we have missed a generation?)

GENERATION 3 - Honore' Lord, 1742-1818 (Apolline Garceau)
Born in old Acadia; had three wives--five children by his first, seven by his second, and eight by his third. Jean Baptiste, fourth generation, was born of the first wife, Apolline Garceau. He was the fifth child of that marriage.

GENERATION 4 - Jean Baptiste Lord, 1779-1828 (Marie Madeleine Ligny)
Born in exile. Buried in L'Acadie, P.Q. Aubin, fifth generation, was the third child of this marriage.

GENERATION 5 - Aubin Lord (March 30, 1809 - January 4, 1889) (Madeleine Roy*)
 Born in L'Acadie; married in L'Acadie May 17, 1831. Moved to Bourbonnais, Illinois around 1850. Died January 4, 1889. Buried in the Cemetery of Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Bourbonnais. Verified in May 1978 by church records and grave marker.

GENERATION 6 - Edward Lord (1835-1915) (Henrietta Piedalue, 1834-1925)
 Edward and Henrietta were married in Bourbonnais, Illinois on June 30, 1854.
 They had ten or twelve children, only five of whom reached maturity (Clovice, Frank, Ellen, Lily, and Leo). Both Edward and Henrietta were buried in Fowler, Indiana. Clovice (of the seventh generation) was the oldest of the children who survived.

Some Details Regarding Edward Lord's Family

Edward is assumed to be the son of Aubin Lord and Madeleine Roy Lord and was born in Canada in 1835--perhaps in L'Acadie. He had, we believe, three brothers: Alexandre, Joseph and David. (The secretary of the Historical Society in Bourbonnais, Illinois, told me in a letter that he lived in a house that was built by an Alexandre Lord.)

It is thought that Aubin moved from Canada to St. Cloud, Minnesota some time before 1850, and later moved to Bourbonnais, Illinois. The U.S. Census of 1870 gave the following information on Aubin's household (Bourbonnais Twp., Pub. 533, Roll 238, Line 14, page 34):

Aubin, 61 years; Madeline, 58 years

*Baptiste, 18

*Mathilda, 21

*Judith, 19

Mideriste, 15

(*Church baptism records list them as his offspring.)

On the same census page the following additional Lords are listed:

Alexandre, 29 (Came from Canada)

Domethilda, 22

Four other names are listed:

Napoleon, 22

Helen

Elizabeth, 22

LaBlanc, 22

(The ages suggest they are not brothers and sisters)

* Originally LeRoy; later shortened to Roy, meaning "the King" in French

In the cemetery in Bourbonnais, there are several grave markers for Lords:¹

Alexandre Lord (1841-1910)	(The dates would suggest that Alexandre
Domethilda (1845-	was the brother of Edward. Both Alexandre and Joseph witnessed the burial record of Aubin, according to the church file in Bourbonnais.)

Some additional information is given in the 1910 U.S. Census on Alexandre and his wife (T623, 12th Census, Kankakee County, City of Bourbonnais):

Alexandre, born November 1841 (59 years old)
 Married 32 years
 Immigrated to U.S. in 1849. In U.S. 59 years
 Occupation: Capitalist. Could read and write

Domethilda, born 1845 (55 years old)
 Immigrated to U.S. in 1854

Other grave markers of interest are as follows:

Joseph Boudreau, March 15, 1822 - February 1903
 Domethilda Roy, January 15, 1823 - October 30, 1885

(Their daughter Domethilda (1845) married Alexandre Lord.
 Also, Domethilda Roy was the sister of Madeline Roy, Aubin Lord's wife.)

The family Bible recorded the marriage of Edward as follows:

Marriage of Edouard Lord et de Henrietta Piedalue le premier de juillet, 1855, tous deux ager de 21 ans.

Also, the marriage was recorded by the church in Bourbonnais, Illinois, as follows:

June 30, 1854, we received the mutual consent of the marriage between Edward Lord and Henriette Piedalue, and having given them the nuptial blessing in the presence of Aubin, Allard, and Dominique Piedalue.

(There are discrepancies between dates on the marriage certificate and the date given in the Bible. We assume the certificate is correct.)

Henrietta, wife of Edward, was French--in every way--and never spoke sufficient English to communicate with her grandchildren. It is assumed that Henrietta was the daughter of Joseph Piedalu dit Prairie who was referred to in the following account, dated April 15, 1926, which was received from the Chief of Information of the Public Archives of Canada in Ottawa:

He was, I believe, the son of Captain Joseph Piedalu and of Marie-Anne Bourassa. He entered the Militia service on the 10th of March, 1788, as a private in his father's company. He served as an ensign in L'Acadie Battalion of Militia during the War of 1812-15. This battalion was then under the command of Major (later Lieutenant Colonel) Charles-Michel de Salaberry. On the 8th of October, 1812, he was promoted to be a lieutenant in the "Compagnie d'Elite de Châteauguay" and he took part in the famous victory of that name on the 26th October, 1813.

On the 15th May, 1826, he is said to be a merchant at Ste-Marguerite de Blairfindie; he was in partnership with Isaac Piedalu.

Joseph Pidealu dit Prairie obtained a grant of land in the Barony of Longueuil, on the 12th February, 1828. This was lot No. 26 and contained 4 arpents* in front by 28 in depth.

The first Piedalu who came to Canada was named Julien, born in 1681, son of Pierre Piedalu and Marie Dolebon, of Courtalier, diocese of Chartres, province of Beauce, France. He died at Laprairie, 5th September, 1739. He had married 1st at Laprairie, on 23 November, 1716, Marie-Marguerite, daughter of Antoine Rousseau. They had three daughters. After the death of his first wife, Julien married, at Laprairie, on the 16th November, 1722, Francoise Aubry, daughter of Louis-Bertrand Aubry, and widow of André Foucreau. They had three sons and six daughters.

Joseph was a grandson of this Julien.

* An "arpent", according to Webster's dictionary, is an old French unit of land measurement, still used in the French quarters of Quebec and Louisiana, equal to about an acre.

Edward and Henrietta spent most of their married life on a farm near Wolcott, Indiana before moving to Fowler. There were at least ten children, five of whom reached maturity. Little is known of the other children except that one was killed by a train near Wolcott, and another died of pneumonia due to over-exposure during an attempt to recover an axe which had fallen through the ice.

The five children who survived were:

Clovice Edward (1865-1934) (Details on Clovice's family are given in Appendix 11)

Ellen (Mrs. Thomas Baner) (1866-)
Descendants included: sons Wilbur and Bernard and daughter Margaret--all deceased.

Frank (1868-1947) (Details on Frank's family are given in Appendix 11)

Lilly (Mrs. Peter Trudeau) (1874-) (Family record not available.)

Leo (1874-)
Children: Edward and Elizabeth. (Family record not available.)

Acadian culture, from Nova Scotia to Louisiana

The French-speaking Acadians of northern Maine are part of an ethnic group that thrived for centuries in enclaves from Nova Scotia to Louisiana.

Their ancestors were French colonists who came to Atlantic Canada almost 400 years ago. In 1755, the British tried to erase the French presence by deporting thousands. Some headed back to France or pushed west. Others found their way to Louisiana, where "Acadian" softened to "Cajun."

The culture is still strong in New Brunswick, an officially bilingual province that's home to 300,000 French-speaking Acadians. About 100,000 live in Nova Scotia. Both see Quebec as a different culture.

French language and customs survive in northern Maine, home to 25,000 Acadians. The days when teachers discouraged students from speaking French are over, and some schools now have bilingual classes.

But economic hard times are forcing young people to leave, taking with them the hope of preserving the culture for another generation.

The cayenne-charged cuisine and fiddle-powered music of southern Cajuns are known everywhere, but even in Louisiana the language is fading. More than 500,000 people in the southwestern part of the state call themselves Cajun, but few under 40 speak French. Many younger Cajuns are giving up country living and moving to middle-class suburbs of Houston.

Over the past century, thousands of up-country Acadians have flocked to New England mill towns. Today 2.5 million call themselves Franco-American — descended from immigrants from both New Brunswick and Quebec. But for most, the Catholic faith is the only strong link to their past.

Family of Moris Powers (1830-1905)
and
Hanora Danaber Powers (1830-1906)

Moris came to this country in 1849, as an immigrant, in company with his father, mother, and brothers John, Thomas, and Dennis. The family came from southern Ireland although it was reported that they had originally migrated from France. It is thought that the family name was LaPour, while in France. In the United States, the name was sometimes spelled Power, since Moris often omitted the "s". Information on Moris's family, as recorded in the 1870 U.S. Census, is reproduced in Appendix 1.

John was a contractor in Lafayette and was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery. Dennis was a soldier and casualty of the Civil War. Thomas was a saloon keeper in Lafayette. His wife, Mrs. Edward Bohner, who remarried after his death, lived in Lafayette in the late 1930's.

It was reported by one of Moris's daughters that the following three persons were sisters of Moris: Ellen (Lumley), Mary (McEssey), and Bridget (Balfe). There might have been another sister named Elizabeth.

Some additional Powers are listed in the 1900 U.S. Census, but were not identified positively as related to Moris:

Thomas Powers (born in 1836 in Ireland) is listed as living in Logansport. He may have been Moris's brother. His wife was Elizabeth; daughter, Bridgit (U.S. Census: V8 Ed 10, Sheet 9, line 88); (Also V73 Ed99, Sheet 11, line 91)

Roger Powers (born in 1850 in Ireland) lived in Bunker Hill, Miami County. (U.S. Census: V 53 Ed 108, Sheet 6, line 38)

David Powers (born in 1864 in Ireland). David was classified as a servant. (U.S. Census: Em-Div 97, Line 198)

Moris Powers married Hanora Danaber, another Irish immigrant, at St. Mary's Church in Lafayette in 1850.

During the early years of their marriage they lived in Lafayette where Moris worked on the Wabash Railroad, laid bricks in the city streets, and did some contract work on the Monon Railroad cut near Battle Ground. This venture proved costly and he eventually had to sell his horses to pay off his men. Moris, like most immigrants, was not afraid of hard work, since at one time he had carried hod for the construction of the Martin Lane Smoke Stack, and worked on the wheelbarrow crew for the Erie Canal. He and Hanora lived on a river boat at one time, and boarded workmen. Later, when he moved to the Otterbein farm, it was reported that he shoveled corn into railroad cars in Lafayette--often as much as 1200 bushels a day--and then walked seventeen miles to his farm at the end of the day!

Moris purchased an eighty-acre farm in Shelby Township, Tippecanoe County, Indiana, on December 26, 1871. The purchase was from Mrs. Finn Winters for $1,400. The land was originally acquired by Henry Ellsworth from the general land office in 1801. It had been, at one time, willed to Yale University by another owner. Moris's estate eventually consisted of 248 acres. When his estate was settled, forty acres were willed to his daughter Hannah, Clovice's wife. Clovis purchased two additional forties in 1907 from other heirs.

The 1900 census reported Moris's son Joseph's birthday as 1869 in Shelby Township. Perhaps the family lived on the farm before the purchase date of 1871 given in the deed.

Much of the land was under water each spring. Wild geese were so abundant that they could be killed with a club. Blue grass and prairie grass grew abundantly. It was said that one could hitch a team to a row of sod which the plows turned over, and it would be pulled along like a rubber plank. All of Moris's children, with the possible exception of John, were born on the farm. There were at least eleven children, with six reaching maturity:

John (Maggie) had a saloon in Lafayette.

Josie (Mrs. Frank R. Schultz). Frank was an engineer on the Monon Railroad.

Children: Lucille, Georgia, Alma, Lisa, and Frank, Jr.)

Joseph (1867-1922) was a farmer. No children.

Ann (1874-1939) taught in the rural school near the farm; later in Indianapolis. No children.

Hannah (1870-1939) (Mrs. Clovice Lord) also taught in a rural school near the farm prior to her marriage. Seven children. (Details on Clovis's and Hannah's family are given in Appendix 11)

Katherine (Mrs. George Koon) (-1958). No children.

Hanora Danaber Powers (1830-1906)

Moris came to this country in 1849, as an immigrant, in company with his father, mother, and brothers John, Thomas, and Dennis. The family came from southern Ireland although it was reported that they had originally migrated from France. It is thought that the family name was LaPour, while in France. In the United States, the name was sometimes spelled Power, since Moris often omitted the "s". Information on Moris's family, as recorded in the 1870 U.S. Census, is reproduced in Appendix 1.

John was a contractor in Lafayette and was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery. Dennis was a soldier and casualty of the Civil War. Thomas was a saloon keeper in Lafayette. His wife, Mrs. Edward Bohner, who remarried after his death, lived in Lafayette in the late 1930's.

It was reported by one of Moris's daughters that the following three persons were sisters of Moris: Ellen (Lumley), Mary (McEssey), and Bridget (Balfe). There might have been another sister named Elizabeth.

Some additional Powers are listed in the 1900 U.S. Census, but were not identified positively as related to Moris:

Thomas Powers (born in 1836 in Ireland) is listed as living in Logansport. He may have been Moris's brother. His wife was Elizabeth; daughter, Bridgit (U.S. Census: V8 Ed 10, Sheet 9, line 88); (Also V73 Ed99, Sheet 11, line 91)

Roger Powers (born in 1850 in Ireland) lived in Bunker Hill, Miami County. (U.S. Census: V 53 Ed 108, Sheet 6, line 38)

David Powers (born in 1864 in Ireland). David was classified as a servant. (U.S. Census: Em-Div 97, Line 198)

Moris Powers married Hanora Danaber, another Irish immigrant, at St. Mary's Church in Lafayette in 1850.

During the early years of their marriage they lived in Lafayette where Moris worked on the Wabash Railroad, laid bricks in the city streets, and did some contract work on the Monon Railroad cut near Battle Ground. This venture proved costly and he eventually had to sell his horses to pay off his men. Moris, like most immigrants, was not afraid of hard work, since at one time he had carried hod for the construction of the Martin Lane Smoke Stack, and worked on the wheelbarrow crew for the Erie Canal. He and Hanora lived on a river boat at one time, and boarded workmen. Later, when he moved to the Otterbein farm, it was reported that he shoveled corn into railroad cars in Lafayette--often as much as 1200 bushels a day--and then walked seventeen miles to his farm at the end of the day!

Clovice Edward Lord, son of Edward (1865-1934)
and
Hannah Powers Lord, daughter of Moris Powers (1870-1939)

Clovice always said he was born in Minnesota. Although no record was found to verify that, it is probably correct since the 1910 U.S. Census shows that his younger brother Frank was born in that state.

His early years were spent on a farm near Wolcott, Indiana. In the 1890's he worked as a telegraph operator for the railroads around Chicago. Later he met, and married, Hannah Powers, who at this time was teaching school in the community.

Clovice and Hannah had seven children: Russell Joseph, Maurice Powers, Francis Everette, Glenn Clovis, Robert Theodore, Mary Alice, and Elizabeth Ann. (SEE APPENDIX 11)

Clovice and his family lived on the Otterbein farm until 1919, when they moved to the farm on the west edge of the village of Kewanna, Indiana. The Otterbein farm was purchased by Dr. Maurice P. Lord, and the Kewanna farm was sold to the Ley family when the family estate was settled in 1929.

This ends this brief historical sketch. The reader will be aware that the emphasis is upon the paternal side of the family. It is hoped that others will fill in missing data and correct errors which may have been made.

Each family is urged to add immediately their own pages of family portraits and such supplementary data as they have available.

EDWARD LORD
(Father of Clovice)
1834-1913

Edward Lord was the son of Aubin and Madeline Roy Lord. He was born near Quebec, Canada, and moved with his parents to Illinois (Kankakee area) about 18____. Aubin, Edward's father, died at Bourbonais (spelling may be incorrect), Illinois, about 1890. Aubin had at least two brothers -- Edward and David.

There is little information on the immediate family of Clovice's father, Edward. It is thought that he had a twin brother who was killed by a train in St. Cloud, Minnesota. The burial was reported to have been in St. Cloud but the date is unknown by me.

The marriage of Edward is recorded in a family Bible, now in my possession and originally obtained from my uncle Leo, as follows:

"Marriage of Edouard Lord et de Henriette Pie'dalus le premier de Juillet, 1855, tous deux ages de 21 ans."

Brought Lord in 1931

Edward and his wife spent a good share of their married life on a farm near Woolcott, Indiana. They moved to Fowler sometime around the turn of the century. They had ten or twelve children: Clovis (_____, 1865 - July 3, 1934); Ellen (m. Thomas Banes) (March 10, 1866 - Aug 24, 1958); Frank, May 30, 1964 (March 30, 1866 - April 24, 1947); Lilly (m. Pete Trudeau) (April 15, 1874 - _____); Leo (twin of Lilly) (April 15, 1874 - June 13, 1964). Little is known about the other children. One of the boys was killed by a train near Woolcott and another died from pneumonia due to overexposure while attempting to rescue his axe which had fallen through the ice.

NOTE TO THE FAMILY:

Many facts are missing from this brief history. Usually a blank space indicates the missing fact. I wish each of you would help me in getting a more complete record. You could:

Interview living relatives and their children for interesting facts;
Consult newspaper files or Church records;
Visit cemeteries and record dates or, better yet, obtain photographs
of the tombstones;
Make corrections or additions to the enclosed material.

I am attaching an extra copy in case you care to pass it on to a relative.
Please forward any information you get to me

(CLOVICE)
NOTES ON THE FAMILY OF CLOVIS LORD

by F. E. Lord

The Name Lord: The name Lord, according to Clovice, my father, might have been spelled A'Loire by his grandfather. On May 22, 1947, R. Brault, Director of the Historical Research Division, Public Archives of Canada, Ottawa, supplied the following information to Brother Bernard regarding the spelling of the name Lord:

"Research No. 29548 -- Among the Gaudet Papers, five spellings are found for the name Lord. They are Laure, L'Or, Lore, Lor and Lord."

In private correspondence dated October 31, 1943, Brother Bernard wrote the following:

" . . . And so the next day I took a trip to Ottawa to consult the National Archives for further light on the Acadians. It was here that I found an error in the Lore line: the genealogist who had furnished what I had already embodied in my tree had been in error to the extent of giving me Alex Lord as the father of Honore Lord, whereas the records show Alex's brother Jacques (James) as the father of Honore. I was fortunate enough to find the family register of both these Lord brothers, both sons of the pioneer Julien Lord, who came directly from France to Port Royal, Nova Scotia (about 1670), where he married Anne-Charlotte Girouard about 1675, the daughter of Francis Girouard and of Anne Aucoin. So there is a correction on the tree to make at this point. The name was originally Laure, not Lord; it was the fault of the English at the time of the expulsion of the Acadians that this change was made. It was Jacques (James) Laure who was exiled; the chances are that very few of the Acadians could read or write, and the British could think of no better spelling for the name than their English Lord, and so that is what is found on the records thereafter. Julien Laure dit Lamontagne was the original Lord of the line in America -- which means that he had a surname, Lamontagne, which in English is translated The Mountain, dit meaning called!"

1 From letter to Lucille (Mrs. John H.) Kremer, Monticello, (formerly Brookston) written by Brother Bernard Gervais, C.S.C.

Note: The writer has been unable to identify the Lords referred to by Brother Bernard with his own branch of the Lord family. Therefore, it may be that Brother Bernard is dealing with an entirely different family. Edward Lord's mother was Madeline Roy. The Gervais Family Tree shows an Edouard Lord whose mother was Marie Ligny.

EPILOGUE

Many experiences could be reported from our days on the Otterbein farm, but only one will be described here--the annual visit to Fowler, Indiana, to see Grandmother Henrietta and Grandfather Edward Lord.

This visit required a long summer day. We left by horse-drawn carriage early in the morning, and drove for about two and one-half hours over dirt and gravel roads. The children's excitement grew as we entered Grandpa's driveway. The carriage came to a stop at the little red barn at the end of the lane where the horses were put up for the day. As the family dismounted from the carriage, we were greeted by grandfather, and together we all proceeded up the board walk, passing the apple tree and the old pump, and entered the house through the side door of the kitchen. Needless to say, our appetites were enhanced by the fragrance of the garlic-seasoned roast pork which was being readied for lunch.

The entourage walked slowly, single file, to the front room where we were to be welcomed by our grandmother who was waiting on a chair by the door. Her silvery gray hair, bobbed just below the ears, was unusual in those days. We understood the proceedings which followed, since our hostess was totally blind and wanted to greet each of us personally. As we went through the line, one by one, we were identified by my father, then were tactfully explored for height and size, and face contour, by soft hands. Grandmother's flowery French expressions seemed to indicate high approval of each child. Aunts, uncles, and cousins stood by and were greeted later. The stage was set for the family reunion.

The journey home seemed especially long for the tired children. As we drove up the long lane, the squeak of the carriage wheels picked up as the horses quickened their pace. The cows had gathered at the barn door, waiting to be fed and milked. The older children who were still awake found the farm chores waiting for them. The others could continue their sleep in their own warm beds.

(CLOVICE)

by F. E. Lord

The Name Lord: The name Lord, according to Clovice, my father, might have been spelled A' Lore by his grandfather. On May 22, 1947, R. Brault, Director of the Historical Research Division, Public Archives of Canada, Ottawa, supplied the following information to Brother Bernard regarding the spelling of the name Lord:

"Research No. 29548 -- Among the Gaudet Papers, five spellings are found for the name Lord. They are Laure, L'Or, Lore, Lor and Lord."

In private correspondence dated October 31, 1943, Brother Bernard wrote the following:

" . . . And so the next day I took a trip to Ottawa to consult the National Archives for further light on the Acadians. It was here that I found an error in the Lord line: the genealogist who had furnished what I had already embodied in my tree had been in error to the extent of giving me Alex Lord as the father of Honore Lord, whereas the records show Alex's brother Jacques (James) as the father of Honore. I was fortunate enough to find the family register of both these Lord brothers, both sons of the pioneer Julien Lord, who came directly from France to Port Royal, Nova Scotia (about 1670), where he married Anne-Charlotte Girouard about 1675, the daughter of Francis Girouard and of Anne Aucoin. So there is a correction on the tree to make at this point. The name was originally Laure, not Lord; it was the fault of the English at the time of the expulsion of the Acadians that this change was made. It was Jacques (James) Laure who was exiled; the chances are that very few of the Acadians could read or write, and the British could think of no better spelling for the name than their English Lord, and so that is what is found on the records thereafter. Julien Laure dit Lamontagne was the original Lord of the line in America -- which means that he had a surname, Lamontagne, which in English is translated The Mountain, dit meaning called!"¹

Note: The writer has been unable to identify the Lords referred to by Brother Bernard with his own branch of the Lord family. Therefore, it may be that Brother Bernard is dealing with an entirely different family. Edward Lord's mother was Madeline Roy. The Gervais Family Tree shows an Edouard Lord whose mother was Marie Ligny.

EDWARD LORD
(Father of Clovice)
1834-1913

Edward Lord was the son of Aubin and Madeline Roy Lord. He was born near Quebec, Canada, and moved with his parents to Illinois (Kankakee area) about 18____. Aubin, Edward's father, died at Bourbonis (spelling may be incorrect), Illinois, about 1890. Aubin had at least two brothers -- Edward and David.

There is little information on the immediate family of Clovice's father, Edward. It is thought that he had a twin brother who was killed by a train in St. Cloud, Minnesota. The burial was reported to have been in St. Cloud but the date is unknown by me.

The marriage of Edward is recorded in a family Bible, now in my possession and originally obtained from my uncle Leo, as follows:

"Marriage of Edouard Lord et de Henriette Pie'dalus le
premier de Juillet, 1855, tous deux ager de 21 ans."

Edward and his wife spent a good share of their married life on a farm near Woolcott, Indiana. They moved to Fowler sometime around the turn of the century. ¹⁹⁰³ They had ten or twelve children: Clovis (_____, 1865 - July 3, 1894); Ellen (m. Thomas Banes) (March 10, 1866 - Aug 24, 1958); Frank, May 30, 1868 (March 30, 1868 - April 24, 1947); Lilly (m. Pete Tredeau) (April 15, 1874 - _____); Leo (twin of Lilly) (April 15, 1874 - June 13, 1964). Little is known about the other children. One of the boys was killed by a train near Woolcott and another died from pneumonia due to overexposure while attempting to rescue his axe which had fallen through the ice.

HENRIETTE FIEDALU (Pie'dalue)
(Wife of Edward Lord)
18__-191__

Henriette was the daughter of Joseph Fiedalu who, according to information received from the Public Archives of Canada was " . . . the son of Captain Joseph Fiedalu and of Marie-Anne Bourassa. He (Joseph) entered the Militia service (of Canada) on the 10th of March, 1788, as a private in his father's company. He served as an ensign in L'Acadie Battalion of Militia during the war of 1812-15. This battalion was then under the command of Major (later Lieutenant Colonel) Charles Michel de Salaberry. On the 8th of October, 1812, he was promoted to be a lieutenant in the 'Compagnie d'Elite de Chateauguay' and he took part in the famous victory of that name on the 26th of October, 1813.

"On the 15th May 1826, he is said to be a merchant at Ste-Marguerite de Blairfindie; he was in partnership with Isaac Fiedalu.

"Joseph Fiedalu dit Prairie obtained a grant of land in the Barony of Longueuil, on the 12th February, 1828. This was lot No. 26 and contained 4 arpents (an arpent is 180 feet) in front by 28 in depth."

According to the Archives.

" . . . the first Fiedalu who came to Canada was named Julien, born in 1681, son of Pierre Fiedalu and Marie Dolebon, of Courtalier, diocese of Chartres, province of Beauce, France. He died at Laprairie, 5th September, 1739. He had married 1st at Laprairie, on 23 November, 1716, Marie-Marguerite, daughter of Antoine Rousseau. They had three daughters. After the death of his first wife, Julien married, at Laprairie, on the 16th November, 1722, Francoise Aubry, daughter of Louis-Bertrand Aubry, and widow of Andre Foucreau. They had three sons and six daughters. Joseph was a grandson of this Julien."

NOTE TO THE FAMILY:

Many facts are missing from this brief history. Usually a blank space indicates the missing fact. I wish each of you would help me in getting a more complete record. You could:

- Interview living relatives and their children for interesting facts
- Consult newspaper files or Church records
- Visit cemeteries and record dates or, better yet, obtain photographs
of the tombstones
- Make corrections or additions to the enclosed material.

I am attaching an extra copy in case you care to pass it on to a relative.
